The report analyses the aspect of reserving national park reserves. The travel and tourism industry is a gigantic one for many governments that aim in providing sites and hospitality to domestic and foreign tourists. As the growth in tourism continues, the aspect of travel continues to grow within people finding relevance to travel. Technology has facilitated the increase in tourism as people find exciting destinations on the internet. With a click on the computer, people find a desired destination, pay for the charges and book for hotels and touring packages. No more charges are incurred through calls to find information on the destination. Airlines have also taken up technology by developing concerns on their booking and inquiry services.

The analysis indicates the importance of environmental conservation while travelling. The environment is the reason why tourists find the travelling experience exiting. Travelling comes with a new experience and to make the experience unforgettable requires working with itineraries and groups. The institutions are structured to provide tourists with a comfortable experience. Environmental concerns during travelling aid in conserving the environments. Tourists travel to exotic sites finding them pollution free. As travel agencies, it is important to inform the tourist on environmentally friendly tours. Tour companies that arrange for the travels should also provide littering bins for the tourist to store trash. A situation where tourists travel to a park or a game reserve requires the intervention of the sites to improve reduced pollution. The problem with dumping trash in the park is that it affects the animals living in the park. The pollution also affects their natural environment causing many to migrate. Conserving the parks for future generations helps in preserving the historical heritage. Travelling comes with a positive connection to the culture, people, and nature. It is important to set standards in the form of peace. Relations to different people come because of interacting. Setting platforms to interact eliminates culture shock experienced by tourists. The best platform is in social institutions such as schools where interconnections with different backgrounds assist in understanding the different cultures.
